

CLEARED OF CHARGES

Walter Olszinski, who runs a grocery store at Sheffield avenue and Cassin street, Hammond, was placed on trial this morning for complicity with Stanley Kask in bringing liquor from Detroit to Hammond by the trunk route.

Olszinski was arrested Monday with Kask when the latter called at the Wabash station in Hammond to claim the trunk from which liquor was trickling. Kask was fined and sentenced to jail Tuesday. Olszinski had furnished his car at Kask's request to haul the trunk from the depot to Kask's room.

After hearing the evidence this morning, Special Judge A. E. Tinkham decided that Walter was an innocent party to the deal and discharged him.

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., Dec. 18.—The spectacle of two men peddling coal from a state-owned automobile at a late hour last night roused the curiosity of Patrolman Starks.

A little quizzing brought a confession, according to the police, that Garland Brown, 35, automobile mechanic employed by the state and P. L. Prather, 39, another state employee "needed the money to buy white mule."

"There was plenty of coal in the state house bins, so they just took a couple of tons and borrowed a truck to peddle it with, it was explained. Petit larceny is the charge.
